Conducting is an Invitation to the Spirit

A smart young woman is disciplined in difficult conducting situations. She has developed the essential ingredients to mold, whatever the mix of the meeting is, into a sweet experience.

Conducting is the invitation for the Spirit and for spiritual moments to follow. Your behavior is the example that influences the remainder of the meeting. What you say and do either brings people's minds to the moment or encourages them to mentally wander.

Your conducting is the plate on which the cookie crumbles. Meaning, your conducting is the foundation on which the meeting plays out (crumbles) and rests.

When conducting we put off inclinations to be a comedian, boaster, wind bag, or any other need for an audience now, for inviting the Spirit later into our meeting. We bring reverence so that others may worship the Savior.
